PATHOLOGY

Path to Publish

August 2016

Greetings from Path to Publish - the monthly AJP newsletter!

It's a pleasure to share our love of all things AJP with our authors, readers, and reviewers. Our goal is not to just promote the Journal but to enhance your experiences. If you would like to see something new or have questions that need answers, let us know at ajp@asip.org.

Did you know...

Social media for scientists includes the growing number of scholarly collaboration networks (SCNs)? More than "friend" sites, SNs like ResearchGate and Mendeley allow researchers to form connections and engage in new collaborations. "The sharing of journal articles is a practice that dates back to when the scholarly journal was invented 350 years ago, only the ease and methods of sharing have changed," writes H. Frederick Dylla (Executive Director Emeritus, American Institute of Physics). For more information on SCNs and how they are impacting publishing, read "Article sharing on scholarly collaborations networks."
