Path to Publish

July 2016

Happy summer from Path to Publish - the monthly AJP newsletter!

Are you ramping up your experiments or slowing them down as you prepare for conference presentations? In the Journal Office we often see an upswing in submissions as summer begins, followed by a slowdown until right before classes start in the fall. With minimal course responsibilities, summer is a great time to assemble data and prepare your manuscript. We're ready to receive it, so submit online today.

Did you know...

Most universities have a media or public information office to assist authors in promoting their work? "The most common misconception is that we actually know what's being published and what's coming up," says Mika Ono, of communications director at Scripps Research Institute in (La Jolla, California).

Promote your results by notifying your media office that you are publishing a new paper and let them help by doing what they do.
