Did you know...

The American Journal of Pathology provides detailed instructions and information for authors regarding everything about the submission and review process? The Instructions for Authors page at AJP online has everything you're looking for when preparing a new manuscript for submission. Starting with the scope of the Journal, and moving through article types and categories, authorship requirements, what to expect from the review process, all the way to publication and production details, the Instructions page has the information you're looking for. You can also find answers and assistance regarding how to prepare figures, tables, and references according to Journal style. All things that will make the revision process more streamlined!

The Instructions for Authors page also includes information regarding AJP's Open Access program, embargo policy, reprint and proof protocols, as well as the information regarding editorial communications that fall outside the range of original research submissions.

AJP is always looking to receive high quality submissions involving the cellular and molecular biology of disease, and we cover a wide range of general pathology topics.

We hope to see your work submitted in the future!
