Path to Publish - the monthly AJP newsletter

The American Journal of Pathology is starting 2019 off with a bang! The January issue features seven new Review articles focusing on Pancreatic Cancer, a Review article from the ASIP 2019 Cotran Early Career Investigator Award winner Dr. John Hanna, as well as a big announcement regarding the scope of the Journal. Starting in 2019, AJP will consider foundational, disease-related studies that incorporate deep learning and artificial intelligence. See the new Editorial from Editor-in-Chief Martha Furie, along with new Associate Editor Stanley Cohen, for more details: Artificial Intelligence and Pathobiology Join Forces in The American Journal of Pathology.

Editor's Choice

Prolyl Hydroxylase Domain-2 Protein Regulates Lipopolysaccharide-Induced Vascular Inflammation

Cotran Early Career Investigator Award: Review

Protein Degradation and the Pathologic Basis of Disease

Open Access

Reduced Terminal Complement Complex Formation in Mice Manifests in Low Bone Mass and Impaired Fracture Healing

Astroprincipin (FAM171A1, C10orf38): A Regulator of Human Cell Shape and Invasive Growth

AJP in the News

Improved understanding of the pathology of dwarfism may lead to new treatment targets

Novel mTORC1 Mechanism Suggests Therapeutic Targets for COMPopathies

Did you know...

The January issue contains our latest series of theme reviews, focusing on Pancreatic Cancer, with an introductory Editorial by ASIP Emeritus member Dr. Danial S. Longnecker: Pancreatic Ductal Adenocarcinoma: Recent Updates

Pancreatic Ductal Adenocarcinoma and Its Precursor Lesions: Histopathology, Cytopathology, and Molecular Pathology

Current Approaches to Pancreatic Cancer Screening

Familial Pancreatic Ductal Adenocarcinoma

The Paradoxical Web of Pancreatic Tumor Microenvironment

miRNA and Gene Expression in Pancreatic Ductal Adenocarcinoma

Circulating Tumor Cells and Cell-Free DNA in Pancreatic Ductal Adenocarcinoma

Tumefactive Inflammatory Diseases of the Pancreas
This article is also an Editor's Choice selection for January and is therefore FREE online to all readers!

Manuscript Prep

The Instructions to Authors have been updated for 2019. When preparing your manuscript, head here for tips on how to format your text, tables, figures and references for proper manuscript submission.

Social Media

Start the new year by following AJP on social media! You can find us on Facebook and Twitter and we encourage all members to share articles with their colleagues. Be sure to tag us when posting about your articles!